THE PROCESSION.

Corcoran's Speech at the St. Nicholas Hotel.

GENERAL INCIDENTS.

Yesterday was a grand day for the Irish residents of this City, a grander one for MICHAEL CORCORAN, and one pregnant with trouble for the gentlemen of the C. S. A. Association.

It would be worse than idle, it would be presumptuous, for us to attempt a description of the appearance of the City, the enthusiasm of the people, and the whole-heartedness of the welcome extended to the City's guest, for the benefit of those who were here; and as for those who were not here, we can say to them simply, that on no previous occasion has the City of New-York tendered to an individual, be he President or Prince, such an apparently heartfelt ovation, such an outpouring of its people, such a hearty, unstinted, undiluted specimen of enthusiastic greeting.

For days they had been preparing for the physical reception; for months they have extended the heart invitation for his return; and when finally the desired end appeared, it seemed as if the people, one and all, were bodily themselves with joy for his release, and with greater joy for his safe return.

Flags, banners, bands, devices, everything which mind could suggest or experience dictate, were brought into requisition generally, and their particular display will be found in detail in the continuation of this account.

We have given already a full account of what the General did and what was done to him, up to midnight in Philadelphia, in earlier issues of the paper, and from that point we now proceed.

At about 1 o'clock at night an exceedingly well-balanced brass band made its appearance at the Continental Hotel, and proceeded to

SERENADE

Gen. CORCORAN, in the most approved and delightful manner. He was fast asleep, having become perfectly used up by the continued strain upon his nervous and physical system, but that made no difference to the hand-accompanying crowd. Cries for CORCORAN broke the stillness of the midnight air, and all the attempts of the band but seemed to excite them to further shoutings. After perhaps half an hour's playing, the band paused for a reply, and Capt. KEEGAN, who was the General's right-hand man on this as on other more serious occasions, appeared upon the balcony. He was greeted with three hearty Irish cheers, and again with others, and finally was permitted to speak.

He said that the General was excessively fatigued; that he had long since retired; that he was far from well; and that as he had a vast amount of work to perform on the morrow, he trusted they would excuse his reappearance.

The crowd—which, though noisy and turbulent, was composed of good men and true—saw the necessities of the case, and gracefully acquiesced, in the shape of nine hearty cheers and a rousing "Hurrah."

"Fetch out Mr. ELY, will you?" said one man, and in an instant the hint was taken, and the vast crowd shouted for the appearance of

HON. ALFRED ELY,

Member of Congress from Rochester, and a fellow-prisoner of the General. A Committee waited upon Mr. ELY, who was found in bed, fast asleep. They would hear of no excuse, however, but insisted upon his coming to the front, which he did in about ten minutes.

The crowd, in the meantime largely increased, received him with great rejoicing, and after several cheering rounds, demanded a speech, and Mr. ELY in response said:

FELLOW-CITIZENS OF PHILADELPHIA: From a man whose eyes are filled with sleep what words can you expect? I come before you cheerfully, however, because I am willing at any sacrifice of personal comfort, to lighten the burdens of my friend and former comrade, CORCORAN. (Three cheers for ELY and CORCORAN.) You do well to cheer him, you do well to encourage him; he is a noble man, has suffered much, is filled with the right spirit, and will do us great service in the field, I am sure.

Mr. ELY then proceeded at some length and with great interest to give a sketch of the old prison times, during which he was often interrupted by cheers and applause of the heartiest kind. He concluded with an earnest appeal that every man before him should carefully consider what is his duty in the present crisis of his country, and then act upon it.

After this the band again performed, and the vast crowd dispersed, cheering for CORCORAN, ELY, SHIELDS, &c., &c., of course.

Early on

FRIDAY MORNING

The party of Gen. CORCORAN, which included the several New-York and Philadelphia Committees, sundry reporters, and other distinguished personages, breakfasted sumptuously at the Continental, preparatory to the day's work.

Immediately after breakfast he received Hon. GEO. B. LINCOLN, Postmaster of Brooklyn, Hon. MOSES F. ODELL, a number of Philadelphia ladies, and a host of the people, who wanted to shake both hands, to God bless him, and cheer him on his way. This part of the new duties Gen. CORCORAN attends to even better than did President LINCOLN.

While the General was occupied in this way, a committee waited upon him in the uniform of a Colonel of infantry and presented the General, when the following took place:

COLONEL: General, I am Col. RIDDLE, of the One Hundred and Sixteenth Pennsylvania Regiment. You remember that on yesterday I told you my regiment was nearly full, and that if it was consistent with propriety we would like to be one of your new brigade. We have received permission from the Governor so to do, and I formally tender yourself and services of the One Hundred and Sixteenth. [Applause.]

To which Gen. CORCORAN replied as follows:

COLONEL: I am delighted to hear of this good news. Your regiment, when I saw yesterday, is a splendid one, and I am very heartily glad to accept your services, or rather your assistance, in putting down this unholy rebellion. [Applause.] We will be pleased to have you accompany us to New-York, Colonel, where we will do whatever may formally be necessary to complete this arrangement.

Philadelphia has the honor of raising the first regiment for the new Corcoran Brigade, or rather what will undoubtedly be the Corcoran Division.

At 11 o'clock the carriages were ready, and the following gentlemen were seated in them:

Gen. MICHAEL CORCORAN.
Samuel L. Baxter, of Select Council, Philadelphia.
John W. Leigh, of Common Council, Philadelphia.
Frederick Fraley, of Philadelphia.
Col. Wm. Rickard, of Philadelphia.
John A. Daley, of Philadelphia.
Col. D. Riddle, of the One Hundred and Sixteenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers.
Maj. Gen. W. Bardwell, of the One Hundred and Sixteenth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers.
Capt. Wm. M. Rehrin, of the Eighty-fourth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers.
Alfred Ely, M. C.
Moses F. Odell, M. C.
Richard O'Gorman.
John Savage.
Wm. J. Kane.
Police Justice Connolly.
Police Sergeant Wood, (who went on to Philadelphia expecting to meet Capt. Dowdy.)
Edward L. Carey.
Capt. James B. Kirker.
Capt. John Breslin.
Lieut. Edmund Connolly, (recently released from captivity by the rebels.)
Lieut. John W. Dempsey.
John J. Henry, President of the Board of Aldermen.
Alderman Peter Mitchell.
Alderman Henry Smith.
Alderman William Welch.
Councilman Thomas Stevenson.

Mr. W. M. RUSSELL, of the Herald; CHARLES E. RAYMOND, of the Express; Wm. M. COLES of the Irish American; Col. S. H. MIX, of the New-York Third Cavalry and Lieut.-Col. REDMOND, a fellow-prisoner of Gen. CORCORAN.

The procession, with Gen. CORCORAN at the head, then paraded through an apparently interminable route, everywhere encountering crowds of cheering and enthusiastic citizens, who wanted to see "CORCORAN," and who did see him, and who shook hands with him to such an extent that it seemed to us as though his right hand would come off, or, at least, lose its cunning. It didn't, however, and at last the depot was reached, where another scene of hurrahing and shouting, pulling and cheering, was enacted,—the populace seeming to be none the less satisfied after ten minutes' trial of their lungs and the General's patience, until at last the whistle sounded and the train moved off—the General standing on the rear platform, uncovered and bowing continually in response to repeated good-byes, until the last shouting boy was hidden from our relieved sight.

The courtesy of the Superintendent induced him to place a special car at the disposal of the General and his friends, so that all were nicely kept together; and as nearly all were personal friends, the time sped quickly by until we reached

BRISTOL.

At this point a crowd of men and women had gathered, and the General, who seems in no way to be affected by physical exertion, and whose improvement in public speaking since his release from prison is remarkable, good-naturedly went out upon the platform to oblige them.

"Ah, but yer the purty boy." "How are you, Colonel?" "We'll raise you a company here, now mind." "You look as though you'd had hard living down there, General—how was it?"

"Oh, yes, I had rather rough fare," replied the General.

"But you're a good egg yet, my boy," said another. And so on was kept up a running series of remarks to, at and about the General, who, in the meantime, smiled pleasantly upon the ladies, shook hands heartily with the men, and waved his cap to them all as they cheered him when the train went on.

which was the next stopping-place, there was a very large and imposing gathering. Several thousand people, we should think, stood where they could see and hear him, and, in response to repeated calls the General resumed his position in the rear of his car.

For some time the confusion was immense; there was no police, no anybody but an excited crowd of people, every one of whom believed that with a little physical exertion, and a liberal disinclination to accommodate his neighbor, he might get a shake of the General's hand. Silence being at length comparatively obtained,

FELLOW-CITIZENS OF TRENTON: My time is short with you, and yet I must say something for you. It would be presumptuous in me to say anything to you about your duty in the present crisis of our beloved country. You all feel, without doubt, as I do, that it is time for every loyal man to show by his acts that he loves his country; that he is willing to serve it—aye, and die for it. [Great applause.] But, my friends, cheering does not do the work. The country is in danger. Ten men now are worth a hundred men twenty days from now. I am standing on rather a delicate platform here, I see, (alluding to the slight trestle-work which cracked under his weight,) but so far as this war is concerned I stand on the broad platform of the Constitution—a platform wide and broad and strong enough to hold me and all my brother Irishmen and protect them from tyranny and oppression. [Cheers.] I am glad to see this enthusiasm. I wish I could impart to any one of you the feelings of my heart, and impress upon you the desire that I have to put a speedy end to this damnable rebellion. [Cheers.] The people at the South are victims, greater victims than you know of. They are poor, deluded people. The Southern poor whites are the most ignorant people I ever saw. They know nothing that is not taught them by their political leaders. They need a sound thrashing as a prelude to a release from their bondage, and an introduction to the blessings of freedom and the enjoyments of liberty. [enthusiastic applause;] and, I think, the kindest act we can do them is to go down, thrash them heartily, and place them again under the protection of the old flag. (Three cheers for the flag.) My friends, I am not coming home to idle, ["Divil a bit, me boy,"] or to hang around the streets. I am here for work. I listen to raise a brigade, and shall go to work to-morrow to obtain my recruits. I want to see the old flag which has been so kind to the Irishman again the master of the entire land. And now, friends, all of you who can go to the war, I beg of you to do so at once, at once. ["We will, we will."] If you will go now you will be of service; if you wait a month you will be too late. Go now. Come now; for I ask you only to do what, please God, I propose to do myself. I thank you heartily for this kind greeting and reception, and assure you that the nearer I reach my home, the stronger is my determination to do my duty, and the greater my imploration that my countrymen will follow my example. [Great applause, and cheers.]

The multitude then began the handshaking business, and carried it on to such an extent that the General was nearly pulled in among them. Finally, however, he got away and into the car, when some ladies, who were old acquaintances, appeared at the side window and wanted to see the General. He went again upon the platform and from thence stepped upon the permanent platform of the station, and after speaking to the ladies, washed the entire length of the passage, followed, surrounded and cheered by the zealous crowd, who were more boisterous than boniferate in their welcome. It was one thing to get down, but quite another to get back. The way was absolutely blocked, packed, jammed, impassable.

He attempted it, however, and by the aid of his friends and an occasional knock down, succeeded in regaining his car, where the crowd again demanded a speech, but in vain. The ladies waved their handkerchiefs, the men hurrahed hoarsely, for they had been at it continuously for some time; the train moved slowly off, and for a few moments rest appeared possible.

At this point, Aldermen HENRY, SMITH and WELSH rendered themselves ever-gratefully to be remembered, by the production of sundry bottles of provisions, &c., which were partaken of with a relish, particularly the &c., which was appropriately of the best quality. Stories were told, songs were sung, and the best of fellowship prevailed for a season, which was only interrupted by the announcement that we were nearing and that the General must be up and doing.

Here as elsewhere there was a great popular turnout. Hundreds and thousands, mainly of the boys and sinews, stood ready for the welcoming cheer. The train stopped, and while the General was shaking hands, Mr. ROBINSON, formerly known as "Richelieu" at Washington, made a neat little speech, in which he toggled the people to join the General's brigade, and help him put down the rebellion.

While the crowd were using up the General's muscle by pump-handling his arm, he noticed a very pretty young lady in the background, and at a word the multitude made way for her, and she passed safely through, like Moses through the Red Sea, and gracefully bowing, presented the General with an exquisite bouquet of the choicest flowers. He thanked her for it, and noticing the address upon the card, said, pleasantly, that the name of Mrs. BURKE would henceforth be most gratefully remembered and associated in his mind with the incidents of the day as among the most pleasant.

Three cheers were given for the lady, three for the General and three for the Union, and then, at the signal, Princeton was left behind.

At this point Mr. ROBERT C. OGDEN, of the firm of DAVIES & CO., met the General and presented him with a full suit of clothing—the regulation uniform of a Brigadier-General.

Gen. CORCORAN retired to the closet, and in a few moments reappeared, clad in his new garments, whereupon the good folks in the car gave him three cheers, and another three for his uniform. After which his health was appropriately drank in flying bumpers. During the latter performance a train loaded with troops passed and gave cheer upon cheer for the General. Upon investigation it proved that the Seventeenth Maine was the first to salute the General after his appearance in his proper dress.

AT NEW-BRUNSWICK

There was just such a crowd as at the other points. When the General appeared, he was saluted with all manner of complimentary and affectionate greetings, and one huge fellow shouted, at the top of his voice, "Now, boys, give us three cheers for the true-hearted Irishman," which were given with a will, as were several others. The women at this point seemed innumerable—not that anybody cared to count them, but if he had, it couldn't be done in a day. They thronged the platforms, crowded the windows and filled the streets, waving handkerchiefs and smiling beautifully on the gallant General.

After the customary preliminaries,

GEN. CORCORAN SAID—

FELLOW-CITIZENS: Permit me to return my heartfelt thanks for this kind reception. I am not yet out of prison; I am in the hands of a committee, who do with me as they will, and I am compelled to obey. I am going home to do my work. I come back again determined to do my share, and hope to find thousands of my fellow citizens who will go back with me. [Applause.] I have no time to make a speech, nor yet the inclination. There is work to be done, and we must do it. We can't shuffle it off on to the hands of other people, and to each and every one of us there is the sacred duty of an American citizen—to save his country in the hour of her need, to aid her in the hour of her peril. ["That's so."] Fellow citizens, I bid you farewell. Go with me, some of you, won't you? I will go with you cheerfully, and hope that together we can do some good. [Great applause.]

At this this point Hon. Mr. ELY came out, and being recognized was called upon for a speech, but said:

"My friends, I am simply going on with my friend, Gen. CORCORAN, and know that you are at this time only interested in what pertains to him. I know him well, and can assure you he deserves your kindness, your welcome, and your support." [Three cheers for ELY.]

The train then passed on, and amid renewed cheering, the General resumed his place in the car.

AT RAHWAY,

in response to the repeated cries of a multitude, the General went upon the platform, and after an enthusiastic reception, said:

FELLOW-CITIZENS: I know that this compliment is not intended for me personally, but simply as an evidence that at all times you are and mean to be devoted to the Government under which you live, and to the maintenance of the Constitution by which you are protected—[Applause]—and also as an evidence that you are determined to do something toward crushing this unholy rebellion. ["Yes, yes."] At last, my friends, the Government seems to have arisen to a full comprehension of their strength, and have determined to put it down, and that at once. [Cheers.] My heart is filled with joy when I see the crowd of men who are leaving for the reinforcement of our army. I mean with them to be a co-laborer, and I want you to be with me co-laborers in this glorious work of crushing out the rebellion, and restoring the absolute sovereignty of the Stars and Stripes. [Three cheers.] My hands have been tied for fourteen months, but, thank God, they are again free, and I can again give all I own and have to the support of the Government. I thank you for your welcome, and beg of you not to let your enthusiasm die away with the occasion, but rather let it incite you to yet better service than has been rendered by any one to the country in her hour of trial. Good bye. [Cheers and applause.]

was the next point of receptive martyrdom.

Mr. J. C. ROSE, in behalf of the citizens of that place, welcomed the General in a very forcible and patriotic speech, and then handed his card to him, after which he retired, and

as follows:

I thank you, Sir, for your kind words, and the people, whom you represent so well, for their flattering reception. But, Sir, I am more pleased with the fact that from you, this day, has gone a company of men who rallied, at the call of the President, to support the Government. [Cheers.] I have always had confidence in the Government, and now that they seem determined to put an end to the war in good earnest, I am more than ever glad of my confidence. The last call of the President for 600,000 men has raised him mightily in my esteem, and I think we will now begin to do something. [Cheers.] The rebellion should be crushed out at once, and, by the blessing of God, I believe we are bound now to do it. [Applause.]

The City of

did its best yesterday, to convince Gen. CORCORAN that it loved him as a man, believed in him as an Irishman, and confided in him as a General. By platoons of a thousand each, the inhabitants rushed to welcome him, and with cheers and shouts and cannon's note, they ushered him into the precincts of the beautiful town.

The General said but little here, but that little was well said. It was as follows:

FELLOW-CITIZENS: I feel that a demonstration like this is not intended for me personally, but as an evidence of your devotion to the Government under which you live, and your determination to do something toward crushing this unholy rebellion.

AMERICAN MATTERS IN FRANCE.

Reasons of Mediation and Recognition—Mr. Dillon's Visit to Thiers—Jocabin Manor of Mr. Mackenzie—Expression of the Emperor to the National Army, &c., &c.

From our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Aug. 6, 1863.

The Prospects of Mediation and Recognition are daily becoming more gloomy. Mr. Dillon's visit to Thiers—Jocabin Manor of [illegible] Regiment Corps, ARMY OF VIRGINIA, Saturday, Aug. 16, 1862.

So many accounts of the battle of Slaughter's Mountain have been widely published in the papers that I would not offer this communication, were it not for the fact that not one of the numerous correspondents whose letters have reached camp, have mentioned the brave boys who, with the laurels won at Cross Keys, Shenandoah Mountain, Rodney, Winchester and Port Republic, went into the engagement on the 9th inst., with the step of veterans, who stood up in the thickest of the battle, a front of unflinching steel; and who, if retired from the contest bleeding and maimed, a mere fragment of that noble "four thousand" who, sixteen months ago, left college and workshop and field, tenderly and sorrowfully parting with friends most dear, and, alas! parting forever. All honor to the soldiers of Massachusetts, New-York, Pennsylvania, or of any other State, who "nobly fought and bravely fell" at Slaughter's Mountain; but let not one fragmental brigade be "blown" by a trifle of "correspondents," who pretend to give details, and yet, with unerring purpose, write many of their own friends. The many whose heart-feelings with jealousy or burn with favoritism, to spot a fit chronicler of events in which there is so common National interest, and full well know "justice" should be awarded to every soldier. As I am favored with the regimental reports, the following statement and statistics will be found correct, and will show the part taken by "Ohio boys" in the battle—other writers having awarded the meed of praise to other troops. "Soon after the artillery had opened, Gen. Geary ordered his brigade, consisting of the Fifth, Seventh, Twenty-ninth and Sixty-sixth Ohio, and Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania—(the latter regiment had been detached from the brigade on the road and sent off to the right)—to support a battery in position on our center, when the Seventh and Sixty-sixth were formed on the first, and the Fifth and Twenty-ninth on the second line of support, about fifty paces in rear of the first. Both lines were soon advanced a short distance, and disturbed a small hollow where they were shelled quite briskly, until about 6 o'clock P. M., when they were ordered forward, across a corn-field, where they found a regiment of regulars in a road or ravine. Lieut.-Col. Patrick tried to get them to advance, but they stuck to their position, and the Ohio boys walked over them—the Fifth calling them cowards.

We received the first rounds of grape and canister just beyond the corn-field, but succeeded in driving the enemy, and had reinforcements arrived at that time, he could have been forced from the field; but for some unexplained reason, we were left to the kind mercy of the reinforced enemy, who knew his business, and no doubt intended to make a finish of the few brave men remaining on the field, by hurling fresh brigades upon us."

The Fifth Ohio went into action with 299; lost 118.

The Seventh Ohio went into action with 302; lost 175.

The Twenty-sixth Ohio went into action with 182; lost 82.

The Sixty-sixth Ohio went into action with 240; lost 162.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

MILITARY MATTERS IN THE CITY.

PROGRESS OF ENLISTMENTS AND PAYMENT OF BOUNTIES.

If the letter of the late order from the War Department on the subject of enlistments be observed, no more Government bounties will be paid to recruits joining the new regiments now organizing, and recruits for regiments in the field have only another week's chance of obtaining the liberal bonus hitherto paid to every one volunteering. The knowledge that yesterday was the last day that they could claim a share in these bounties, brought out much of the volunteering element as prefer the new regiments in unprecedentedly large force,—many encampments near the City receiving so many accessions within a few hours as had come in during a whole previous week. Several regiments nearly filled up, and, if an extension of another fortnight be granted them, will certainly be able to reach the maximum standard required by the Inspector-General, without any necessity being created on their account for either consolidation or a draft. The encampments where recruits for the new regiments are enrolled, are so numerous and scattered as to render it impossible to ascertain the exact number brought into each, or the aggregate passed at them all; but there could scarcely have been less than a thousand passed on Thursday and yesterday. Recruits for regiments in the field are mustered in at the office in White-street, and it is easier to find how many of them there are. Yesterday there were some 400, of which a majority were for Scott's and the Irish brigades, Duryee's Zouaves and the Seventy-ninth. Capt. Larkin and Lieut. Kenahow, the mustering officers, and Dr. Mott and his assistants, who superintend the inspections, had a busy time of it. So likewise did Capt. Cass, who has in charge the disbursement of the Government bounties of $2 and $25. By persevering effort and downright hard work, Capt. Cass has managed to catch up all the arrears of his office, and is now able to take each day's work and dispose of it as it comes; so that every volunteer can make sure of being attended to directly he has been indorsed by the surgeons and taken the oath, which Capt. Larkin administers to him. Capt. Cass has nothing to do with the distribution of the State bounties. Those have to be obtained by captains of companies from Col. Bliss, but the process of getting them has been simplified, and very little cause for dissatisfaction at delay exists. No official notice has been issued of the time when the State bounties will cease, but it is well to mention again that the payment of United States bounties were discontinued to recruits for new regiments yesterday, and will be discontinued to recruits for regiments in the field on Monday week.

FIFTY-FIRST REGIMENT.

The Fifty-first Regiment N. Y. V. is one of the finest the State has sent to the war. It was originally taken out by Col. Frizzell, but he has lately been acting as a Brigadier-General, and the command has consequently devolved on Lieut.-Col. Porter, a fine soldier and a popular man. The Fifty-first have a recruiting-station in the Park, and young men intending to enlist cannot do better than enlist in its ranks. The officers here on recruiting duty have a large fund at their disposal to enable them to pay the bounties instantly, and liberal extra bounties, coming from private sources, are given to every volunteer. The Fifty-first has a glorious record. In the words of its official programme, it "was the first to plant its flag on the ramparts of the enemy at Roanoke Island and Newbern." Those memorable names, now inscribed upon its standard, testify to the courage of the men and the gallantry and skill of its officers. Lieut.-Col. Porter has been twice honorably mentioned for courage and eminent services rendered on the battle-field. Any man may always be proud to say, in years to come, "I was a member of the Fifty-first New-York Volunteers." The regiment belongs to Gen. Burnside's corps d'armée, the fortunate General, whose battles are counted by victories.

THE JUDGE ADVOCATE-GENERAL'S OFFICE—PREPARATIONS FOR THE DRAFT.

Gen. Anthon is still busily engaged in selecting officers for the enrollment of those liable to be drafted. Upon the selection of the officer, he takes the oath of allegiance, and is handed the following commission:

{ } No. —— STATE OF NEW-YORK, {
{ } JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT, {
{ } NEW-YORK, Aug. 21, 1862. }

To all whom these presents may come, greeting:

Know ye, that, by virtue of the authority in me vested by the Commander-in-Chief, I have appointed, and by these presents do appoint A—— B—— Enrolling Officer of —— Election District, of the —— Ward, of the City of New-York, with power and authority, in a courteous and proper manner, to inquire and ascertain the names and ages of all white male citizens residing in said Election District, for the purpose of Enrollment in accordance with the Proclamation of the President of the United States. And for so doing, this shall be your Commission.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, the day and year above written.

(Signed) WM. H. ANTHON,
Judge Advocate and Chief Enrolling Officer.

This commission is for the purpose of establishing the authority of the enrolling officer, if it should be doubted by any citizen. Each officer has a pass-book given him, in which is a map of his district, and a circular of instructions. At the close of the day he hands in the book to the General, Anthon, from which are made fair copies, for official purposes, of all names thereon; and the officer is then paid $2 per name for his services.

PATRIOTISM IN THE U. S. MARSHAL'S OFFICE.

U. S. Marshal Murray is determined not to be the last one of the Government officials in the city in contributing his quota to the active patriotism called forth by the present crisis. He has had a recruiting station in operation for three weeks past, in Elm street, which he has supported at his own expense, and has instructed all his deputies to act as recruiting officers, and use their utmost exertions to secure volunteers. One of his subordinates, Deputy Sheriff Lee, is raising a company, to be commanded, by himself, and has already more than half filled its ranks.

THE LAWYERS AND THE DRAFT.

Many members of the bar have made anxious inquiries of Judge-Advocate-General Anthon whether they were not exempt from the draft. The General has decided in the negative.

THE STANTON LEGION.

This favorite corps is rapidly filling up. The rendezvous, at No. 8 Roosevelt-street, is doing a good business, under the active superintendence of the Recruiting Sergeant, Mr. Grosjean Tavies, for many years well known as the machinist at the principal theatres in this City.

DURYEE'S ZOUAVES.

This splendid regiment, which has done such fine service on the Peninsula, and which is destined to win still greater glory on other fields, is nearly full, and those who desire to join it must visit the head-quarters at No. 566 Broadway speedily, or the chance will be lost. By the way, why may not the Zouaves organize another regiment on a plan similar to that which they have so successfully tested? With the same energy, and the same facilities for recruiting which they command, this might be very easily accomplished.

THE FIFTY-SIXTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. V., (GARDES LAFAYETTE.)

This well-known corps is now recruiting in this City, under the supervision of First Lieut. Richmond. They have been in service for over one year, and, under the command of Colonel Rush De Trobriand, took an active and glorious part in nearly all the battles on the Peninsula. Besides the large bounties and other ordinary inducements, men enlisting in this regiment will be serving alongside well-tried veterans, under experienced officers, and are sent to the field at once, instead of being kept for months in camps of instruction. Headquarters at Lafayette Hall, [illegible]

NEW-YORK MOUNTED RIFLES.

Col. Doubt's regiment of Mounted Rifles, which has been over a year in the service, and is now stationed at Suffolk, Va., is a very excellent organization for young men of an adventurous turn of mind to join. The cavalry of the army has won well-earned distinctions, and has many fascinations to which infantry can lay no claim. The recruiting station of the Mounted Rifles are in the City Hall-park and at No. 409 Broadway.

SECOND CALIFORNIA REGIMENT.

The Second California Regiment, which was originally raised in this City, to form part of the lamented Baker's Brigade, wants a few men to bring it up to its full number. It is a regiment that has gained laurels already, and is pretty sure to win plenty more. Its Commander, Col. Rodman Matheson, is a graduate of West Point, and a thorough soldier. The Californians (Thirty-second N. Y. S. V.) belong to the Army of the Potomac, and have gone through the whole of the Peninsular campaign. Lieut. R. Stanley is the recruiting officer, and his headquarters are at No. 564 Broadway.

FIRST UNITED STATES CHASSEURS.

This famous New-York Regiment (Col. Josh Cochrane's) is in want of about 200 men to recuperate it to its former strength. It, too, is a veteran regiment of the Peninsula, and has greatly distinguished itself. No word need be said of the popularity of its Colonel, and few New-Yorkers but will recognise in its Lieutenant-Colonel, Major Selkr, of the Seventh National Guard, who has the reputation of being one of the most accomplished officers in the service. Capt. T. H. Hogenbogman and Lieut. Taussedill are recruiting for the United States Chasseurs at No. 544 Broadway.

THE SICKLES BRIGADE.

The fighting Excelsiors have extensive additions made to their numbers daily. The renown of the brigade, the regard in which Gen. Sickles is held, and the splendid new uniforms just served out to the men, are inducements to volunteers which cannot be resisted. Certainly no men in the service look better than these do now—the first four regiments in their neat Chasseur dress, and the fifth in its magnificent costume, à la Zouave, of the genuine French description. The recruiting camp in the City Hall Park has a crowd around it all day long.

FIFTH SENATORIAL DISTRICT REGIMENT.

The regiment raised in the Fifth Senatorial District, and now in camp at Turtle Bay, is so nearly completed that it has received its State number and marching orders, and will be on its way to the seat of war some time next week. Its commander, Col. Elias Peissner, is a friend of Gen. Sigel's, and has obtained permission to join the corps d'armée of that brave and practical soldier. One or two companies require a few more men to enable them to parade one hundred strong, as they should do, and these ought to be forthcoming by Monday afternoon. Americans, Irish and Germans will all find companies to their liking, and all will emulate each other in liking their Colonel. Capt. Lloyd's company (F) recruiting station, in the Park, may be specially recommended to intelligent Americans. It is composed of a superior class of men. The regimental headquarters are at Lincoln Hall, East Houston-street.

EMPIRE BRIGADE.

Brig.-Gen. Frank B. Spinola is working like twenty ordinary men to fill up his brigade before the 1st of September. His exertions are seconded by the indefatigable subordinates who are to command his regiments and by the Company line officers. The Brigade has recruiting stations in almost every street in this City and Brooklyn, and great inducements are offered to citizens of all nationalities to make up their choice if they intend to volunteer. The camp at East New-York is a lovely, interesting place to see. The dress parades there bring to mind Camp Scott, S. I., in the best days of the organization of the Excelsior Brigade.

THE IRONSIDES REGIMENT.

ADDRESS OF THE ARMY COMMITTEE OF THE NEW-YORK YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

To all Loyal Young Men:

The prayer of your country is the voice of a mother to her children. Manhood is called upon to defend the bosom which nourished infancy. The student must guard the school that taught him. The Christian must protect his altar. The entire armor of patriotism must clothe every limb of the nation.

Devoting ourselves to the cause without reservation, we invoke the moral heart of the people to respond with us, promptly and efficiently. We appeal to all Christian Churches and associations to aid us in placing at the service of the Government a regiment composed of earnest, loyal, God-fearing men! We invite the enrollment of volunteers who would preserve in camp the moral relations of social life—soldiers who will so live that they may be prepared to die.

To form this Regimental Brotherhood, we ask the active cooperation of Churches, and the sympathy of good men. We would place in the field at least one regiment, which shall be free from the evils of camps, that arise through neglect of moral and physical duty—a regiment whose welfare shall be our special care, and in whose ranks the parent and the wife may commit their loved ones, assured that their moral, sanitary and material wants will be watched over with untiring interest by friends at home.

The Army Committee will attend at the Rooms of the New-York Young Men's Christian Association Bible House, corner of Third Avenue and Ninth street, where applications can be made at once for enrollment headings, and where all communications may be addressed to "Ironsides Regiment," New-York Young Men's Christian Association. Names of single volunteers may also be sent to either of the following named gentlemen, for enrollment:

At a meeting held at the Pavilion of the old Elysian Fields last night, for the purpose of taking measures to avoid a draft, the number of men required from Hoboken is 76, and from Fiddler's 56.

A PATRIOTIC MEETING OF THE BOAT BUILDERS OF THE BROOKLYN NAVY-YARD.

At a meeting of the employees in the Boat-Building Department of the Brooklyn Navy-yard, held on Friday, Aug. 22, for the purpose of providing means for the families of those who may go to the war, James Hyndshaw in the Chair, James R. Van Valen, Secretary, the following preamble and resolutions were read and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, In order to speedily terminate the unholy rebellion now threatening the very existence of our Government; and in order, by a liberal donation of money, time or services, those who have entrained through love of family ties, to offer themselves as volunteers, therefore

Resolved, That we, employees in the Boat Building Department of the Brooklyn Navy-yard, do pledge ourselves to pay to each employee of this department who shall enlist in defence of the same and to the wife of each who go to the war (no less than $5 per week), with an additional $1 per week for each child.

Resolved, That on next pay day we do commence the monthly payment of one day's pay into the hands of the Treasurer to form a fund for the above purposes, said payment to continue so long as in the judgment of the Treasurer it may be necessary.

Resolved, That the President appoint a Visiting Committee of three, whose duty each month it shall be to visit the families during the month in which they are employed.

Resolved, That Mr. James Williamson, cashier of this Department, be declared Treasurer.

On motion, adjourned to meet at the call of the Chair.

WAR MEETING IN THE TENTH WARD.

Prominent and popular speakers have been engaged to address the gathering. Those of the inhabitants of the Ward who would like to see a grab assisted will of course be present. The place of assemblage is No. 313 Atlantic-street.

BROOKLYN ARRIVALS.—Rear-Admiral Storer, Gen. Hitchcock, Gen. Ruger and family, all of the United States Navy; John S. Isaac, United States Steamer Vermont; Gen. Sweeny, U. S. A.; Wm. B. Dodge; F. L. Smith, United States Steamer Tuscarora, were amongst the arrivals at the Pierrepont House yesterday.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE COMMON COUNCIL.—The Mayor has called a special meeting of the Common Council, for Thursday next, at 5 o'clock P. M., to consider the following subjects: To appropriate money for building pier foot of North Twenty-fifth-street; to receive reports from the Committee on Lands and Places; to act on the matter of Sewer District No. 11, Map No. 2; to provide tents for volunteers, and on communications from the Mayor.

PROBABLE FATAL RESULT OF A QUARREL.—Messrs Reese and Thomas Carson got into a fight yesterday at the corner of Hoyt and Degraw streets, when Reese, as alleged, struck Carson a violent blow, which knocked him over an embankment about twenty feet high, causing a fracture of one arm and leg. The injured man was conveyed to the City Hospital. Reese made his escape.

Mrs. Plumb Disinherited from Assist.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Tribune:

I was this morning discharged from arrest, by orders from Washington, on giving assurance as follows:

1. "To support, protect and defend the Government, as established by the Constitution." This I can heartily do, as I always have done, believing that the Constitution is armed with power, not only to put down the rebellion, but also Slavery.

2. "Not to discourage enlistments." Instead of offering such discouragement, I would have the Government adopt such a policy as would stimulate enlistments in the highest degree.

3. "Not to give aid or comfort to the enemy." So far from giving him aid or comfort, I would hurl a more swift, sweeping and terrible destruction upon him than has yet been employed by the Government.

Yours, &c., D. PLUMB.

No. 240 Broadway, Friday, Aug. 22, 1862.

A Ladies' Fair will be held in Talcott's Hall, Sing Sing, for the benefit of St. Augustine's Church, Rev. Father McGillan, Pastor. This gentleman was for many years pastor of Transfiguration Church in this City, and some of the ladies of this Church—among them Miss Anne Sweeney—will aid this undertaking by their presence during the festival, which commences Aug. 25, and lasts until the 30th inst. The articles selected for the occasion are of the most elegant description, and the admission is reduced to 10 cents; children free. A boat leaves the foot of Jay-street every morning, and returns at 2 P. M., for the convenience of those who desire to patronize this charitable object.

Found Drowned.—The body of an unknown man, about 40 years of age, was found yesterday in the North River, near the foot of Forty-third-street. The skull of the deceased was fractured, caused, it is presumed, by his striking against some of the timbers of the pier. The deceased was dressed in pepper pants, silk vest, a woven sailor-jacket, and a leather strap about his waist. Coroner Naughan held an inquest upon the body, when a verdict of death from drowning was rendered.

Arrest for Embezzlement.—Chas. Fassin, a clerk in the employ of Gustaves Fassing, No. 125 West Broadway, was arrested yesterday, upon the charge of having embezzled the sum of $450 of his employer's money. The prisoner was taken before Justice Bakeman, where, during his examination, he denied the charge, and stated that it was a conspiracy on the part of Fassing and others to defraud him out of $4,000 worth of property. Fassin was committed for examination.

A Probable Homicide.—An elderly gentleman named George Nethouse was found in an insensible condition, at an early hour yesterday morning, in Gouverneur-street. He was bleeding profusely from several wounds on the head and other parts of his person. The Police conveyed him to the Hospital in a dying condition. It is not known as yet who inflicted the injuries.

Charged with Disloyalty.—The Harbor Police yesterday boarded the steamer Mississippi, and took therefrom fourteen men, who are charged with attempting to evade the draft. They are mostly Bowery boatmen and runaway who had shipped as seamen. They were taken to the Central office, where, after an examination by the Provost-Marshal, they were discharged.

Quarantine.—The steamship Honduras, from Key West, has been sent to the Lower Quarantine, in consequence of a death on board.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

Brooklyn Military Affairs.

Yesterday, one hundred and sixty men were enlisted in Col. Cook's Senatorial Regiment, and eighty-two in the First Regiment Empire Brigade—Col. Jourdan. The parade of the First Regiment, which was to have taken place yesterday, was postponed in consequence of the reception of Gen. Corcoran in New-York. The tents expected for this regiment on Saturday will not be forthcoming until Wednesday next, when the encampment will be formed on the parade-ground at East New-York.

Gen. J. C. Smith, who went to Albany to ascertain the exact number of men required from Brooklyn to fill the quota under the last call for volunteers, arrived home yesterday, and makes the following report:

The undersigned, on behalf of himself and of his associate Hon. Andrew J. Pascos, reports that from interviews with Gov. Morgan and Adjt.-Gen. Hillhouse, it appears that—

1. That the draft will be made according to the order issued from the Adjutant-General's office, dated Aug. 13, General Orders No. 67, which states that, "In ascertaining the number of men to be drafted in the several counties, they will be charged with their quotas of the whole force to be raised, and credited with the aggregate numbers raised by each since July 2, 1862, both for the old regiments and the new, and the draft in each county will be for the difference."

2. That in getting at the number to be credited as above, the Governor had determined to credit each county with the number enlisted from each county, according to the place of residing, and not according to the place of enlistment.

3. That counties only, and not towns nor wards are to be recognized by the Governor, so that each county must raise its quota.

In view of these facts it is recommended that each Ward and Town Committee of Kings County send a delegate to meet at the Governor's Room, in the City Hall, of the City of Brooklyn, on Saturday,

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE RESOLUTION.

Everybody will probably ever remember the 4th of July, 1876, as the first occasion of this century, as we hope, when celebrated in this or any other land to celebrate the gradual popular evolution of a free country. Gen. MCCLELLAN'S late eloquent oration, delivered by the greatest orator of his day, will be read and studied by all who love liberty and hate oppression. His whole passage from Washington to Philadelphia, and about 24,000 Chesapeake ; and to see the colors from the Capitol, as a token of true union and loyalty to the Constitution. Military prison the whole North has been as deep in interest, warped in this City yesterday afternoon by the passage of the Seventh Regiment, as it left Grand Central Depot, on its way to Washington. Its whole passage from Washington to Philadelphia, and about 24,000 had come to see it. Nobody has been in all this city, of course, to see the Seventh, who do not execute it to be at all events. LETTER NO. XIII.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: When a patient has all the symptoms of consumption strongly marked, it requires very little skill in the physician to tell the nature of his disease. No respectable nurse, who had once seen such a case, could mistake it. But there are certain obscure cases, arising from tubercles in the lungs, yet marked by no outward signs by which their nature may be known, which test to the utmost the diagnostic skill of the physician. The books describe these cases under the name "latent consumption," because the tubercles are in a latent or quiescent state, producing neither cough, expectoration, nor spitting of blood. These are in this form of consumption no symptoms which directly point to the lungs. The practiced eye of a physician of experience in the treatment of pulmonary diseases, would probably detect in the countenance what would lead him to carefully examine the chest, but the general practitioner, having only a limited experience in the physiognomy of consumptive cases, would see nothing beyond the fact that the patient was slowly declining in energy and bodily vigor. As there is no cough, no pain in the chest, no expectoration, this latent consumption may be overlooked altogether until some one of these symptoms arouse, and that, in latent consumption, means until the last stage sets in, and the end is near at hand. A gentleman came to consult me the other day from Springfield, Mass., whose disease was of this character, and yet it had never been suspected by either his physicians or friends. Had he not accidentally taken cold, and suffered from a slight pain in his side, he would not have even thought it possible his lungs could be diseased. On examining his chest, I found the superior lobe of one lung filled with tubercules in a latent state. This gentleman had been in poor health several months, but nobody could tell him why he did not get well. He had accounted half a dozen or more times during the day for the cause of his disease, and yet almost as many different opinions. Some treated his case very lightly, and promised a speedy cure by a course of "tonics." Others advised "change of air and position." One told him it was all "stomach," while another assured him that his "liver" was out of order. He cried in turn the Register, the Newspaper, and the Water Cure, but obtained no benefit from either. Those who knew the least about his disease promised the most but accomplished nothing, while not one suspected the lungs as being the cause of his bad health till the case, as in the majority of physicians are ignorant of the means of diagnosis, but few experience is limited, and these few so occupied and minds distracted by attendance on each disease, that they are extremely apt to overlook and misread obscure effectless of this nature. Had the stethoscope been applied to the chest, it is probable some of them might have detected the presence of tubercles; but this was not done; and but for the accident of taking cold, it is almost certain the disease would have gone on to disorganization of the lungs and the sacrifice of the patient's life.

I have said that in latent consumption there are no symptoms which indicate disease of the lungs—often no symptoms of any kind sufficient to account for the declining health of the patient. But this is not always the case. In very many cases the patient suffers severely from indigestion or flatulence, and irregular action of the bowels, or from pain over the region of the bowels. Where such is the case there is some excuse for mistaking, for a time, the nature of the disease; but I cannot too strongly impress upon the minds of general practitioners the great importance of frequent examinations of the chest in all obscure cases of disease.

Let it not be supposed that latent consumption is rare. LAENNEC, the great authority on this disease, says: "We may indeed say that the greater number of cases of consumption are latent, since nothing is more common than to find tubercles in the lungs of persons dying of what was supposed to be some other disease, though never showing during life any symptom of consumption. It has frequently appeared to me, from carefully comparing the history of my patients with the appearances on dissection, that the great number of FIRST ATTACKS are MISTAKEN FOR COLDS." And Sir JAMES CLARK, Physician to her Majesty Queen Victoria, in speaking of the liability to mistakes of this character, says: "I have known more than one example of extensive tubercular disease of the lungs discovered by a post-mortem examination, where during during life the disease was looked for in the STOMACH, LIVER or BOWELS."

From these facts you will understand what a mistake those persons make who flatter themselves that they are in no danger of consumption because they have not a cough, pain in the chest, or expectoration. Thousands whose have never had these symptoms are to-day carrying about in the lungs the seeds of their own destruction. Whoever finds himself less vigorous and capable of exertion than formerly—and, indeed, all persons who are in bad health without knowing why, should suspect the lungs as the cause, and never rest satisfied until they have submitted them to careful examination. I know of nothing which should more strongly excite their fears than being told their "liver" is diseased. Experience has proved that the great majority of such cases turn out in the end to be mere cases of masked or latent consumption.

This kind of consumption, if detected in time and properly treated, is one of the most curable, since it is the strength and vitality still remaining in the system which masks its character and retards its progress.

In my next letter I shall point out the prevalence and peculiarity of consumption in Africa and young children. Your obedient servant,

ROBERT HUNTER, M. D.,
Physician for diseases of the Lungs.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

We select the following, which have appeared within the past week:

"It is an admirable picture of Southern life, especially the life of the negroes and poor whites."—Tribune, New-York.

"It is most intensely interesting, and depicts Southern peculiarities with remarkable skill."—N. Y. Farmer, Boston.

"All who are acquainted with the far South will recognize the pictures of life as faithful and often masterly. Every page is delightfully fresh and original. The narrative carries the reader onward with increasing interest to the close."—Methodist, New-York.

"It is one of the most deeply interesting books published in our day."—Traveller, Boston.

"It is impossible to read the book without feeling that the author is relating facts—not only as to new scenes, but as he particularizes them. He never tells a man as he is too much excited by what he has seen to consider in what terms he shall express himself, and the consequence is, his sentences are like those of one earnestly talking to us, and the scenes he depicts have all the vivid distinctness of unpremeditated nature."—Mercury, New-York.

"It is the most faithful picture of the workings of Slavery we have ever seen. The fact that the author was a 'Douglas Democrat,' and exhibited the usual prejudices against the colored man, only makes his testimony the stronger. We wish it could be read by every family in the loyal States."—Christian Luminary, Cincinnati.

"Every reader feels that the story is true—true to nature, and a veritable record of actual events."—Observer, Salem, Mass.

"The most vivid and striking pictures of life and society at the South that has ever appeared. The author describes what he has witnessed with a fidelity that carries a conviction of its verity to the mind of the reader."—Miner's Journal, Pottsville, Penn.

"It would be well for the country if this book were in the hands of every intelligent reader."—Republican, Lapeer, Mich.

"The pictures which the author gives of the workings of the peculiar institution are not surpassed by the most tragic scenes in any dividend portrayed by Mrs. Stowe."—Daily Journal, Providence, R. I.

"It is the most interesting book issued since Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin."—New Covenant, Chicago, Ill.

"The author has great powers of description, a true sense of the pathetic and the ridiculous; and shows up faithfully the "poor whites." We have seen, in this State, poor families from North and South Carolina, who actually did not know as much as an intelligent horse."—Prairie Farmer, Chicago, Ill.

"It possesses powerful dramatic interest, rendering it more attractive as a story than any work of fiction lately issued from the press. Added to this, it is almost remarkable recitation of facts, illustrating directly the causes which produced the present gigantic rebellion, and which intimately affect the welfare of the American people."—Express, Rochester, New-York.

"The work is not only one of thrilling interest, but valuable as a source of information. While strictly true, it has in a rich degree the best charms of a novel."—Christian Mirror, Portland, Me.

"Its style is vivid and piquant, and charged with home-strokes, and the delineation of character limited and skilful."—New-Yorker.

"The best way to effect the condemnation of Slavery is to set down upon it but the exhibit it. Paint it just as it is, and you do more than in any other way to remove it. It cannot bear exposure; hence, such works as Among the Pines are invaluable for general circulation among the people."—Republican, Taunton, Mass.

"Mr. Kirkes so vividly reproduces Southern life, that for the time being the reader feels himself in the midst of so true in this of the less stirring scenes, and the doings of the subordinate persons of the drama, that to single out the more striking parts for especial praise would be doing injustice to the equal and admirable skill with which every essential point and necessary action is treated."—Courier, Houston, Texas.

THE NEW AMERICAN NOVEL.

THE MORGESONS.

FIFTH Edition just printed. Mrs. Elizabeth Stoddard's novel.

THE MORGESONS.

A new edition now ready. One vol., paper cover, price 50 cents, and cloth bound, (on superior heavy paper,) price $1.

"THE MORGESONS" has attracted more attention than any novel published for years. Indeed, it is doubtful whether any American novel ever excited so much curiosity among all classes of readers. The first work of its accomplished author, (who will, however, widely known as a writer in our best magazines,) is placed beside ones by the side of the finest living novelists. The best critics compare her to Charlotte Brontë and Miss Evans in intense power and reality; to Balzac in subtle analysis of character and passion; to Dickens in humor; and to Mrs. Stowe and Hawthorne in knowledge of, and fidelity to, New-England life and character. In the truth and sharpness of her portraiture, the vivid reality of her descriptions, the spirit and piquancy of her dialogues, and the peculiar interest of her story, she has never been surpassed. The Press all over the country is unanimous in its praise, as may be seen by the following extracts:

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"The cleverest analytic study of character produced in America since Hawthorne's 'Scarlet Letter.'"—New-York Albion.

"In the delineations of the lights and shades of New-England character, the author may be said to stand parallel with Hawthorne, but she takes a larger canvas, and has a freer touch."—Philadelphia Press.

"Every after story of New-England scenes, haunts and houses has been written; but none has come nearer combining with invented words, but the Shakespearian phraseology of the farm and the country. In this respect the idiomatic framing of her dialogue—she is vastly the superior of Mrs. Stowe."—Boston Saturday Evening Gazette.

"Among the new novels, 'The Morgesons' is worthy the attention of every reader who seeks a remarkable story, of which is interested in American literature. The detailed delineation of character and events, and the quiet reliance upon the unexciting interest of the subject, are admirable."—Harper's Weekly.

"The Morgesons' needs no more apology or advertisement than 'Jane Eyre' or 'Adam Bede' needed. It will compel its own recognition by the sheer force of the genius which it exhibits; and, like those novels, will make fame for its author."—New-York World.

"Told with poetic grace—as well as dramatic power, and bearing the unmistakable stamp of genius in every chapter."—New-York Times.

"Everything relating to costume, language and social habits, is drawn with admirable fidelity; the details are managed with remarkable skill, and even the most apparently trivial effects are wrought up into a masses of accordance coupling and powerful impressions. The style is marked with uncommon terseness and piquancy."—New-York Tribune.

"It contains by far the best pictures of New-England life and manners that we have seen since the days of its accomplished author at the head of those writers who have sought to delineate Yankee characters."—Home Journal.

"It is a remarkable book, especially for a woman; for few women have exhibited such analytical power in same measure, as novel of New-England life has surpassed it."—Peterson's Magazine.

"We have no hesitation, after reading the book, in pronouncing it one of the most remarkable novels ever written in this country."—Harvest Times.

"The charm of the book lies in its graphic pictures of New-England life and character, and in its conversations. The spirit and piquancy of the latter are unrivaled."—Springfield Republican.

"It is an unmistakable work of genius, and gives evidence of powers that may be employed in the production of a work which will take rank with the novels of the great masters of fiction now wielding their pens in Great Britain."—Sunday Courier.

"The Morgesons' is a very successful work. Its characters and methods of treating them startle one by their power, and the reserve force of the writer is evidently as great as that which is revealed. As a dialect novel it is one of the most successful which has yet been written by a really talk of rural New-England."—Brooklyn City News.

The serial Tales, "Romola," by Miss EVANS, "Mistress and Maid," by Miss MULOCK, and "Orley Farm," by Mr. TROLLOPE, will also be continued, each by its Author. It is issued in HARPER'S MAGAZINE, simultaneously with their publication in England.

The papers upon our "Rebellions" having been concluded, there will be commenced in the next Number a series written by the same Author upon our "Confederacies and Leagues," beginning with "The New-England Confederacy of 1643."

The Article in this Number upon "Iron-clad Vessels" will be followed by others, describing the various processes employed in the production of the materials and munitions of war.

The materials for the bands of the Publishers of HARPER'S MAGAZINE were never more abundant and valuable than at present. Tales, Essays and Poems; Voyages, Travels and Explorations, in every part of the world; papers upon Natural History, Popular Science, Literature, Arts and Manufactures; everything that can go to make up an entertaining and instructive miscellany will constitute the contents of the Magazine. The Editorial Departments will include notes and comments upon the topics of the day, at home and abroad; a condensed summary of the current history of the times, with anecdotes and facetiæ. Illustrations will be profusely given wherever they can add to the value or interest of the papers. These are produced at an expense which exceeds the entire outlay for literary and artistic matter of any similar periodical in the world.

Apart from its merely temporary interest as a Periodical, HARPER'S MAGAZINE has from the first contained a succession of papers of permanent value, which, reader's complete set is a desirable acquisition to any public or private library. Mrs. MACKENZIE DANIELS'
New Novel,
MARRYING FOR MONEY,
Is published and for sale this day by all booksellers and news agents everywhere. It is a large octavo volume of 345 pages, large type, double columns, and printed on the finest and best of white paper.

Read what Dr. R. Shelton Mackenzie, Editor of the Philadelphia Press, says of it, editorially, in that paper:

MARRYING FOR MONEY.—Mrs. Mackenzie Daniels, an English novelist of considerable repute and ability, has written an excellent novel on this text, called "Marrying for Money," which T. B. Peterson & Brothers have just published from the advanced proof-sheets purchased from the author. It is a book of many merits, and, in American pretensions, very widely read with. It is, to all intents and purposes, a love story; but, unlike most works of that class, is full of interest from the great truth of its characters and thorough probability of its incidents. The heroine, a certain Edmonia Leonard Vivian, is a splendid natural, noble and devoted woman. Her real love, her second husband is worthy of her. There is a Miss Powis too, one of the best of old maids, whom we specially indorse. In a word, next to Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "The Earl's Heirs," "The Channings," and "A Life's Secret," and on a level with Miss Muloch, we may claim possession of Mrs. Daniels, as a good novelist. The book is exactly suited to this season, when people have the great relish for more than intellectual enjoyment. We are sure to see it in a few days, in every one's hands. As usual, it is published at one-fifteenth of the English price, or at 50 cents in paper or 75 cents in cloth, on receipt of which price the publishers will send it everywhere, free of postage.

THE WAR.

The Times' Correspondence of the New-York Times.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Wednesday, July 23, 1862.

Never, perhaps, have the Brazilians so Americanized as during the last few weeks. On the 20th of June, the Emperor and Imperial family inaugurated the new American Ferry between this city and Praia Grande, on the other side of our magnificent bay. The Emperor accepted a collation offered him by Mr. W. F. Jones, the President of the Company. The hosts were visited by tens of thousands of people, all open-mouthed with wonder at seeing people, horses and carriages pass to and fro on the water with the same ease and safety as on terra firma. Numerous little accidents have occurred, thus impairing the public confidence in the success of the new enterprise. We trust, however, that our energetic manager, Dr. Barker, will overcome all those small difficulties as soon as he has finished his newspaper-battle with the so-called proprietor of the ferry, Dr. VAN ERVEN.

The Constitution, Capt. EDWARDS, took us all by surprise, making the unparalleled trip of 17 days from New-York to this port. She is a magnificent specimen of naval architecture, and was visited by upward of 6,000 persons during her stay here. The Emperor received an invitation to visit her, but was obliged to decline, owing to the indisposition of the Empress, who has been attacked with the "Rheumatism," which compels her to keep her bed. The arrival of the Constitution has revived the desire for a line of steamers between the United States and Brazils, and I am well informed that this Government is prepared to grant a handsome subvention in furtherance of a line. The commerce of the United States would undoubtedly be greatly benefited by it; and how that Brazil is looked to as a desirable place for settlement, the fact, from passengers only, would prove in a short time, without taking into consideration the fact of the United States being the purchasers of nearly two-thirds of the entire coffee and sugar crops of Brazil. A certain Mr. DAUNEMANN, an English Brazilian, having left the direction of the Dom Pedro II. Railroad, has thought fit to asperse the integrity of Major A. ESCRAGNOLLE, Jr., the American Engineer-in-Chief of the road, but I am happy to say that the Major's conduct, in all his transactions, have been thoroughly sustained by the entire management headed by Mr. CORREA, who has ever been a staunch supporter of our American engineers and constructors. It was proved that the Major had prevented the said Mr. DAUNEMANN from speculating in the affairs of the Company.

Another American enterprise is doing a large business, viz., SEALEY'S & ROGERS' floating circus has arrived, and are drawing crowded houses. They have really an excellent company, under the management of Messrs. ROGERS & VAN NORMAN. They gave a clear benefit the other day for two of our benevolent asylums, and generously gave the entire receipts without even deducting the expenses. Mexican affairs are occupying us a little now. DR MARIZINHO CARROS, a leader of the Opposition, severely censures the Government for its inactivity in a question of such vital importance to all the nations of the American Continent.

"Commercial affairs are stagnant, the quotations in my last being without alteration. The Bank of Brazil has raised discounts to 11½ per cent. Exchange 28¾. Coffee steady. R. C. PARSONS, Esq., American Consul at this port, has left for the United States with his family, for the benefit of his health. We trust he will return to us, where he is so much beloved, invigorated and benefited by the trip. Gen. WEBB and family continue to enjoy excellent health, notwithstanding our tropical heat.

Yours truly, THE MAJOR.

The Canal at Vicksburgh—How to Open the Mississippi.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I see the Engineers have failed in their endeavor to cut the canal through the bend at Vicksburgh, and that the Southern papers are laughing over the event. I have seen several just such failures before on the Mississippi. Capt. SHREVE, who was employed by the Government to improve the navigation, made the same mistake in his attempt to open the Horseshoe Bend in 1838. I could take a couple of hundred hands, and have the old Father of Waters flowing across the bend at Vicksburgh in three days. Tell those who have the work in charge to cut through that argillaceous stratum they have come to. I know they have encountered it, although it has not been mentioned)—cut through this until they reach the substratum of sand, and the river goes through, even if the ditch through the clay is not over a foot in width.

The Mississippi bottom is formed first of sand, next of this argillaceous formation, and above, the alluvium in some places quite a thick deposit of sedimentary matter, only a few feet deep, and it may be on at Vicksburgh, and is formed over six feet in thickness. However, cut through it, and as long as sand possesses its natural capillary attraction, nothing under Heaven can stop the river from going through the cut, as the sand will wash out, undermining this superstratum of stiff clay, when the superincumbent alluvium falls with it, and within 24 hours—mark my words,—a stream can pass through the new channel. I have seen this done. In some places this argillaceous formation does not exist at all, as was the case at Bunches Cut Off, where the bend was opened in the morning and steamboats passed through at night, so rapidly did the banks wash away.

Yours, JOHN BANVARD.

ARMY AND NAVY INTELLIGENCE.

In obedience to orders from Washington, the following changes have been made in the superintendence of recruiting for the regular army in this vicinity: Capt. BARRY takes charge of the chief rendezvous for infantry in Chatham-street, vice STROTZ, promoted; and Capt. HARDY assumes command at Cedar-street, vice MCGOWAN.

The Band of the Eleventh United States Infantry, which has for the past six months been stationed at Fort Independence, has been ordered to join the regiment at Fox Ridge, Arkansas, and will leave for that destination early the coming week. The Eleventh is one of our new regiments—the same in which FRANK REDWOOD, "the avenger of BULL RUN," holds a Captain's commission.

The following is a correct list of the officers of the United States steam-frigate Potomac, which is reported to have been ordered as convoy to the freighted frigate New Ironsides:

Captain, S. W. GODON; Lieutenant Commanding, J. YOUNG; Surgeon, H. MAYO; Paymaster, L. JAYBURN; First Lieutenant of Marines, F. C. POPE; Chief Engineer, JOHN A. GRIER; Assistant Surgeon, E. D. PAYNE; Acting Masters, J. OGILVIE, L. BAKER, C. B. WILSON; Engineers, H. B. NONES, H. BROWN, W. H. GLADING, G. W. CARRICK, John FRANKLIN; Carpenter, G. WINER; Sailmaker, W. S. L. BRAYTON; Boatswain, Wm. LONG; Gunner, G. W. ORMSETTER; Master's Mates, W. C. CURTIS, W. FROST, C. H. HOWLAND, S. ALLEN, F. RITTER; Captain's Clerk, G. E. YARDLEY; Paymaster's Clerk, J. G. SANKEY.

Lieut.-Commanding RAMSAY, of the Brooklyn Navy-Yard, was yesterday placed under arrest, by official orders. He has been acting as instructor of gunnery at this station for some time. Lieut. RAMSAY being a Louisianian, it is presumed that his offence is of a treasonable nature.

Rear-Admiral DUPONT, commanding the South Atlantic blockading squadron, has selected the following officers as his staff:

Fleet-Captain, C. F. HOLSEY; Flag Lieutenant, S. W. PRESTON; Fleet Surgeon, George CLYMER, M. D.; Chief Engineer and Inspector of Machinery, R. M. MCCLEERY; Commander of Flag-ship, (Wabash,) T. G. CORBIN. Lieut. TAUSSIG has been detached from the Dale, and ordered to command the Alabama. Lieut.-Commanding WESTCOTT has been detached from the Ellen, and ordered to command the Dale. Lieut. GILES has been detached from the Alabama, and ordered to command the Ellen.

Death of Col. Monroe—Resolutions by the Officers of the Twenty-second Regiment.

At a special meeting of the Board of Officers of the Twenty-second Regiment, N. Y. S. M., held at Camp Aspinwall, Harper's Ferry, Va., on the evening of Aug. 12, 1862, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, In the inscrutable Providence of God, He has seen fit to take from us our Colonel, the late lamented JAMES MONROE,

Resolved, That while we would ever bow submissively before that hand which orders all things in wisdom and in love, we yet feel that in being bereaved of one no less perfectly fitted by ready sympathy with his command, and affectionate care for the welfare of his men, than by urbanity of character, military acquirements and large experience to lead and animate others, the Twenty-second Regiment has sustained an irreparable loss.

Resolved, That in the noble act of Col. MONROE, in disregarding his own most serious illness, and at the peril of his life rejoining his regiment at his post, we recognize the spirit of honor and self-devotion that sacrifices all to duty and affection, and that we revere his memory as that of one who laid down his life in our behalf, that we, with him, might faithfully and efficiently obey our country's call.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the sorrowing wife and children of him we loved so well,—their affliction is ours,—and while we feel that we can only repeat words, whose meaning fortunately has too often withered, we still claim it as our right to speak with more than ordinary emotion, while we commend the "widow and the fatherless" to the care of a covenant-keeping God.

LLOYD ASPINWALL, Lieut.-Col. Com'g,
President Board of Officers.
BENJAMIN LEE, Surgeon,
Secretary of Board of Officers.

LAW REPORTS.

A Curious Proceeding—A Synagogue in Trouble.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Before Justice Barnard.

The People ex rel. the Trustees of the Congregation Beth Hamedrash vs. B. Goldstein et al.—The defendants, four in number, were members of the Jewish Congregation Beth Hamedrash, whose synagogue is at No. 76 Allen-street, but, from some cause or other, have been debarred the privilege of membership by the President and Trustees. In consequence of this action on the part of the officers, it is alleged that the defendants, on Saturday last, proceeded in a body, with a posse of friends, to the synagogue, where they broke open the locks, dispossessed the President, deposed the ministers, and put men of their own choice in their places. This led to several assaults and batteries, which are now the subjects of investigation on criminal complaints before Justice CARMAN at the Tombs.

The President and Trustees then began an action for forcible entry and detainer in the Supreme Court, which was called for trial yesterday. A sufficient number of jurors, allowed in actions for forcible entry and detainer, not being present, the case was postponed until Friday next, both parties stipulating that the synagogue should remain closed in the meantime.

The "Creditor's Reporter" in Court Again.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Before Justice Barnard.

Caroline Mathieu vs. A. Hareg; Caroline Wistoff vs. Same.—The defendant, as appeared in a report of this case in the TIMES of Aug. 9, is the editor and proprietor of a paper called the Creditor's Reporter, for free distribution, the principal contents of which are advertisements of old debts, which the editor announces for sale on the most reasonable terms. Thus, Mrs. Smith will advertise that John Doe, residing at No. —— Chamberlain-st, is indebted to her for board and lodgings to the amount of $100, which debt she is anxious to sell at a liberal discount. Apply to, &c. The plaintiffs began being advertised in this manner, Harey was arrested in an action for libel, and admitted to bail in the sum of $1,000. He now applies to be discharged from the order of arrest, which the Court, after argument of counsel, denied, though reducing the bail to $500.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than sixty thousand cases, without the loss of a single patient. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, never restrains the patient from exposure, or restriction to the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and distressing effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in two days; cures the most inveterate cases in a few days. The effects of mercury, lead, poisons, &c., are counteracted by the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, unless the remedy is used. This is what he claims for it, and what no other will do. Hence, the failure in this respect has become so well known, that no article has ever appeared in the world of equal importance to it, for the public, after a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, in regard to some patient who had consumed the whole field of the faculty, and what the doctor will appear, is the case of a victim to some mean quack doctor in the City that has not blanched it; and when they find their fees are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 5 Division-st. Sent for 12 three-cent stamps. 200 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.
